Distance from the Sun

Saturn is the sixth planet from the sun. It is 9.537 astronomical units from the sun, or a little more than 9.5 times the distance between Earth and the sun.

Saturn's neighbors are Jupiter and Uranus.

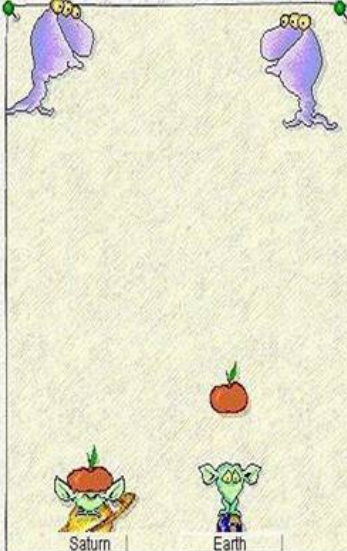

Gravity

Saturn is a gaseous planet with no solid surface. Its mass is enormous - 95.2 times the mass of Earth.

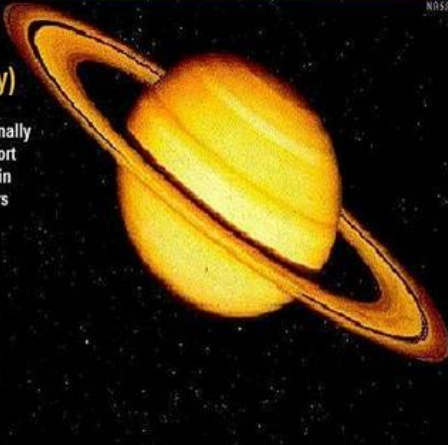

Scientists generally measure a planet's gravity at its surface. For the gaseous planets, they had to set a different reference point. They chose the altitude at which the planet's atmospheric pressure equals Earth's atmospheric pressure at sea level, which is 1 atmosphere (14 psi).

At this altitude on Saturn, its gravity is almost equal to the gravity we feel on Earth. Saturn's mass is so great that its gravitational field constrains the dozens of moons and rings surrounding it.

Rotation Period (Length of One Day)

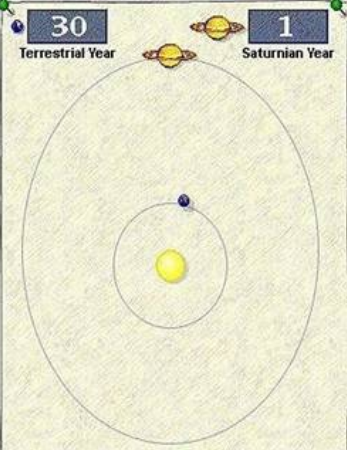

Saturn may have an exceptionally long year, but it has a very short day. Saturn completes one spin around its axis in only 10 hours and 40 minutes.

Period of Revolution (Length of One Year)

Like most planets, Saturn has an elliptical orbit.

It takes Saturn almost 30 Earth-years to complete one orbit around the sun. This means that during a single Earth-year, Saturn only travels about 1/30 of its orbit around the sun.
